

Subject: Fwd: News
From: Rob Burgess <rburgess@nuvo.net>
To: Rob Burgess <robertandertonburgess@gmail.com>
Date Sent: Wed, 17 Apr 2019 14:30:51 -0400
Date Received:

----- Forwarded message -----

From: NUVO <newsletter@nuvo.net>
Date: Wed, Mar 20, 2019 at 1:10 PM
Subject: News
To: <editors@nuvo.net>

News: Wednesday, March 13

This Week in News

Updated Mar 14, 2019

Hello,

It's Wednesday, so you already know it's Rob Burgess, News Editor, back with you once again. I hope your week is going well. The weekend will be upon us soon enough, I'm told. And, with daylight saving time already here, we're already an hour closer to it. (That's how this works, right?)

A quick programming note: For those of you who signed up for my News newsletter, that's being combined with what was formerly known as /Slash. Now it's all just one newsletter called News.

I know I mentioned it last week, but we've gone through a lot of changes here at NUVO lately, as the note from our publisher, Kevin McKinney, outlined. If you have already become a member, thank you so very much. It means a lot. If you haven't, please do so now. We need your support now more than ever to continue our work. We also need your voice. We want you to be a part of our movement toward a new form of local journalism. The best part is, it's tax-deductible, and all proceeds will go to paying the salaries of the editorial staff. (Like me!)

Speaking of membership, once you become a member, you'll be receiving a special newsletter from Kevin every Monday. In this week's newsletter, members were the first to know about the panel discussion I will be hosting at the CBD Expo Midwest 2019 from 11:45 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Friday at the Indianapolis Marriott East, 7202 E. 21st St. The topic of the panel is "CBD vs. THC." You can buy tickets at www.CBDExpo.net. Our members also received a code in Monday's email for half off their admission price. If you become a member today or tomorrow, send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net and let me know, and I'll send you the code directly.

I wanted to update you on my progress researching the question you selected for me to report from our first round of City Committee voting. Once again, here's the winning question:

"My questions are about Indianapolis migration trends within I-465. Is the downtown housing boom sustainable? How many racial and economic minorities are being forced out? Where are they going? I'd like to see a story focused on answering these questions."

I will have the story itself finished by the end of the month, and it's going to contain a lot of helpful resources provided by you, my readers.

Last week, I told you how Allison Luthe, executive director of the Martin Luther King Community Center, pointed me towards the work of the Indiana University Public Policy Institute. Yesterday, I had the chance to speak with Breanca Merritt, the director for PPI's Center for Research on Inclusion and Social Policy. She told me about a study on hate crimes they had just published, but she also helped me with the migration trends story. I also told you last week I would be speaking with Joanna Taft, executive director of the Harrison Center. She provided even more context for the story, and pointed me towards some very relevant research from Alan Mallach, senior fellow at the Center for Community Progress, and gave me the contact information for Bruce Baird of Renew Indianapolis. I am reaching out to both of them now. Do you have any additional resources you could point me towards for this story? Let me know!

I also mentioned last week that I had a chance to hear a presentation from Pulitzer Prize-winning author Matthew Desmond, the author of the book, Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City. I am almost done reading the second of the book's three parts, and it's an amazing, crushing look at housing insecurity and desperate poverty. I can tell this book is going to stay with me for a long time. After last week's newsletter went out, Zach Schalk contacted me and suggested I read The Color of Law: A Forgotten History of How Our Government Segregated America* by Richard

Rothstein. I just picked it up from the library last night, and I'm excited to start reading it later this week after I finish with Evicted. Just from what I've seen of this book, it's already reminding me of Ta-Nehisi Coates' June 2014 article in The Atlantic, "The Case for Reparations."

This afternoon I'm headed to a presentation of "a major grant to Crossroads Education, LLC from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation to transform mathematics education in four Indianapolis middle school," according to the press release. "Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett, Indiana State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jennifer McCormick, Crossroads Education CEO Kevin Berkopes, and education, business and community leaders from around the city will be in attendance. The news conference will take place at 2 p.m. at Ignite Achievement Academy, 1002 W. 25th St., and will feature a tour of a state-of-the-art learning lab." I'm covering this event for a future story, but I want to your help. Do you have expertise in this subject you'd like to share with me? If so, send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net. I would love to have your help with this story.

I hope you have a great rest of your week. Before I go, here's a concert for you to listen to by my new favorite band, Khruangbin. It's great instrumental music, the guitar is stellar, and that rhythm section never leaves the pocket.

Best,

Rob Burgess

News Editor

Callout: Your Open Mic Experiences

Seth needs your help with another communal music piece that specifically looks at open mics in Indianapolis.

Callout: What's Next For Indy's Spoken Word Scene?

Dan needs your help with a communal arts piece that specifically looks at the spoken word scene in Indianapolis.

NUVO, 3951 N. Meridian St., Suite 200, Indianapolis, IN 46208

SafeUnsubscribe™ editors@nuvo.net

Update Profile | About our service provider

Sent by newsletter@nuvo.net

--

Rob Burgess
News Editor, NUVO
NUVO.net

Phone: 317-808-4614
Twitter: @robaburg

Subject: News
From: NUVO <newsletter@nuvo.net>
To: rburgess@nuvo.net
Date Sent: Wed, 20 Mar 2019 13:10:17 -0400 (EDT)
Date Received: Wed, 20 Mar 2019 10:10:30 -0700 (PDT)

News: Wednesday, March 13

This Week in News

Updated Mar 14, 2019

Hello,

It's Wednesday, so you already know it's Rob Burgess, News Editor, back with you once again. I hope your week is going well. The weekend will be upon us soon enough, I'm told. And, with daylight saving time already here, we're already an hour closer to it. (That's how this works, right?)

A quick programming note: For those of you who signed up for my News newsletter, that's being combined with what was formerly known as /Slash. Now it's all just one newsletter called News.

I know I mentioned it last week, but we've gone through a lot of changes here at NUVO lately, as the note from our publisher, Kevin McKinney, outlined. If you have already become a member, thank you so very much. It means a lot. If you haven't, please do so now. We need your support now more than ever to continue our work.

We also need your voice. We want you to be a part of our movement toward a new form of local journalism. The best part is, it's tax-deductible, and all proceeds will go to paying the salaries of the editorial staff. (Like me!)

Speaking of membership, once you become a member, you'll be receiving a special newsletter from Kevin every Monday. In this week's newsletter, members were the first to know about the panel discussion I will be hosting at the CBD Expo Midwest 2019 from 11:45 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Friday at the Indianapolis Marriott East, 7202 E. 21st St. The topic of the panel is "CBD vs. THC." You can buy tickets at www.CBDExpo.net. Our members also received a code in Monday's email for half off their admission price. If you become a member today or tomorrow, send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net and let me know, and I'll send you the code directly.

I wanted to update you on my progress researching the question you selected for me to report from our first round of City Committee voting. Once again, here's the winning question:

"My questions are about Indianapolis migration trends within I-465. Is the downtown housing boom sustainable? How many racial and economic minorities are being forced out? Where are they going? I'd like to see a story focused on answering these questions."

I will have the story itself finished by the end of the month, and it's going to contain a lot of helpful resources provided by you, my readers.

Last week, I told you how Allison Luthe, executive director of the Martin Luther King Community Center, pointed me towards the work of the Indiana University Public Policy Institute. Yesterday, I had the chance to speak with Breanca Merritt, the director for PPI's Center for Research on Inclusion and Social Policy. She told me about a study on hate crimes they had just published, but she also helped me with the migration trends story. I also told you last week I would be speaking with Joanna Taft, executive director of the Harrison Center. She provided even more context for the story, and pointed me towards some very relevant research from Alan Mallach, senior fellow at the Center for Community Progress, and gave me the contact information for Bruce Baird of Renew Indianapolis. I am reaching out to both of them now. Do you have any additional resources you could point me towards for this story? Let me know!

I also mentioned last week that I had a chance to hear a presentation from Pulitzer Prize-winning author Matthew Desmond, the author of the book, Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City. I am almost done reading the second of the book's three parts, and it's an amazing, crushing look at housing insecurity and desperate poverty. I can tell this book is going to stay with me for a long time. After last week's newsletter went out, Zach Schalk contacted me and suggested I read The Color of Law: A Forgotten History of How Our Government Segregated America* by Richard Rothstein. I just picked it up from the library last night, and I'm excited to start reading it later this week after I finish with Evicted. Just from what I've seen of this book, it's already reminding me of Ta-Nehisi Coates' June 2014 article in The Atlantic, "The Case for Reparations."

This afternoon I'm headed to a presentation of "a major grant to Crossroads Education, LLC from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation to transform mathematics education in four Indianapolis middle school," according to the press release. "Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett, Indiana State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jennifer McCormick, Crossroads Education CEO Kevin Berkopes, and education, business and community leaders from around the city will be in attendance. The news conference will take place at 2 p.m. at Ignite Achievement Academy, 1002 W. 25th St., and will feature a tour of a state-of-the-art learning lab." I'm covering this event for a future story, but I want to your help. Do you have expertise in this subject you'd like to share with me? If so, send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net. I would love to have your help with this story.

I hope you have a great rest of your week. Before I go, here's a concert for you to listen to by my new favorite band, Khruangbin. It's great instrumental music, the guitar is stellar, and that rhythm section never leaves the pocket.

Best,

Rob Burgess

News Editor

Callout: Your Open Mic Experiences

Seth needs your help with another communal music piece that specifically looks at open mics in Indianapolis.

Callout: What's Next For Indy's Spoken Word Scene?

Dan needs your help with a communal arts piece that specifically looks at the spoken word scene in Indianapolis.

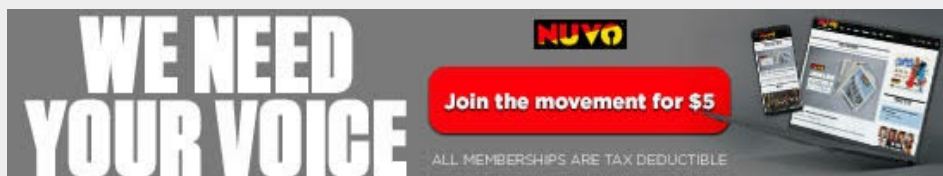

NUVO, 3951 N. Meridian St., Suite 200, Indianapolis, IN 46208

SafeUnsubscribe™ rburgess@nuvo.net

Update Profile | About our service provider

Sent by newsletter@nuvo.net

Subject: News
From: NUVO <newsletter@nuvo.net>
To: editors@nuvo.net
Date Sent: Wed, 20 Mar 2019 13:10:17 -0400 (EDT)
Date Received: Wed, 20 Mar 2019 10:10:18 -0700 (PDT)

News: Wednesday, March 13

This Week in News

Updated Mar 14, 2019

Hello,

It's Wednesday, so you already know it's Rob Burgess, News Editor, back with you once again. I hope your week is going well. The weekend will be upon us soon enough, I'm told. And, with daylight saving time already here, we're already an hour closer to it. (That's how this works, right?)

A quick programming note: For those of you who signed up for my News newsletter, that's being combined with what was formerly known as /Slash. Now it's all just one newsletter called News.

I know I mentioned it last week, but we've gone through a lot of changes here at NUVO lately, as the note from our publisher, Kevin McKinney, outlined. If you have already become a member, thank you so very much. It means a lot. If you haven't, please do so now. We need your support now more than ever to continue our work.

We also need your voice. We want you to be a part of our movement toward a new form of local journalism. The best part is, it's tax-deductible, and all proceeds will go to paying the salaries of the editorial staff. (Like me!)

Speaking of membership, once you become a member, you'll be receiving a special newsletter from Kevin every Monday. In this week's newsletter, members were the first to know about the panel discussion I will be hosting at the CBD Expo Midwest 2019 from 11:45 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Friday at the Indianapolis Marriott East, 7202 E. 21st St. The topic of the panel is "CBD vs. THC." You can buy tickets at www.CBDExpo.net. Our members also received a code in Monday's email for half off their admission price. If you become a member today or tomorrow, send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net and let me know, and I'll send you the code directly.

I wanted to update you on my progress researching the question you selected for me to report from our first round of City Committee voting. Once again, here's the winning question:

"My questions are about Indianapolis migration trends within I-465. Is the downtown housing boom sustainable? How many racial and economic minorities are being forced out? Where are they going? I'd like to see a story focused on answering these questions."

I will have the story itself finished by the end of the month, and it's going to contain a lot of helpful resources provided by you, my readers.

Last week, I told you how Allison Luthe, executive director of the Martin Luther King Community Center, pointed me towards the work of the Indiana University Public Policy Institute. Yesterday, I had the chance to speak with Breanca Merritt, the director for PPI's Center for Research on Inclusion and Social Policy. She told me about a study on hate crimes they had just published, but she also helped me with the migration trends story. I also told you last week I would be speaking with Joanna Taft, executive director of the Harrison Center. She provided even more context for the story, and pointed me towards some very relevant research from Alan Mallach, senior fellow at the Center for Community Progress, and gave me the contact information for Bruce Baird of Renew Indianapolis. I am reaching out to both of them now. Do you have any additional resources you could point me towards for this story? Let me know!

I also mentioned last week that I had a chance to hear a presentation from Pulitzer Prize-winning author Matthew Desmond, the author of the book, Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City. I am almost done reading the second of the book's three parts, and it's an amazing, crushing look at housing insecurity and desperate poverty. I can tell this book is going to stay with me for a long time. After last week's newsletter went out, Zach Schalk contacted me and suggested I read The Color of Law: A Forgotten History of How Our Government Segregated America* by Richard Rothstein. I just picked it up from the library last night, and I'm excited to start reading it later this week after I finish with Evicted. Just from what I've seen of this book, it's already reminding me of Ta-Nehisi Coates' June 2014 article in The Atlantic, "The Case for Reparations."

This afternoon I'm headed to a presentation of "a major grant to Crossroads Education, LLC from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation to transform mathematics education in four Indianapolis middle school," according to the press release. "Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett, Indiana State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jennifer McCormick, Crossroads Education CEO Kevin Berkopes, and education, business and community leaders from around the city will be in attendance. The news conference will take place at 2 p.m. at Ignite Achievement Academy, 1002 W. 25th St., and will feature a tour of a state-of-the-art learning lab." I'm covering this event for a future story, but I want to your help. Do you have expertise in this subject you'd like to share with me? If so, send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net. I would love to have your help with this story.

I hope you have a great rest of your week. Before I go, here's a concert for you to listen to by my new favorite band, Khruangbin. It's great instrumental music, the guitar is stellar, and that rhythm section never leaves the pocket.

Best,

Rob Burgess

News Editor

Callout: Your Open Mic Experiences

Seth needs your help with another communal music piece that specifically looks at open mics in Indianapolis.

Callout: What's Next For Indy's Spoken Word Scene?

Dan needs your help with a communal arts piece that specifically looks at the spoken word scene in Indianapolis.

NUVO, 3951 N. Meridian St., Suite 200, Indianapolis, IN 46208

SafeUnsubscribe™ editors@nuvo.net

Update Profile | About our service provider

Sent by newsletter@nuvo.net